NEW SUBSCRIBERS AIM OF HUGE CAMPAIGN BY TOWNSHIP REGISTER

Brightening business prospects and an increase in advertising are the basis for a subscription campaign launched this week by the Township Register, according to Norman H. Parks, publisher.

Taking a form hitherto confined to campaigns by the large daily papers, the plan will offer to new subscribers four nationally known magazines and the Register for one year for a sum that previously would cover the cost of the local paper only.

In beginning the campaign, Parks stated that he is anxious to make the Register of even greater value to advertisers by virtue of an increased subscription list.

W. H. Howard, experienced circulation manager, will have charge of the campaign. He will make his headquarters at the Register office.

A page advertisement appearing on page seven of this paper, embodies the list of magazines available through this offer, and tells in detail of the plan. It is the hope of the Township Register that present subscribers will pass along word of the offer to other interested people.

LITERARY GROUP MAY ORGANIZE AT NILES

A parent literary society, with sub-groups for drama, painting and other allied arts may be the outcome of a meeting and dramatic reading at the Old Adobe on the California Nursery Company grounds last Thursday night, held under the direction of the Rev. Wesley Dexter Gordon.

Discussion of the proposal pointed to a mounting enthusiasm. It was the opinion of the group that there is a sufficient number of people in the district who are interested enough in creative work to strive for such an organization. It is thought that the drama, or little theater group, if started will be the nucleus.

"El Americano," a play of old California in three acts, was read by Mr. Gordon. It was written by him, and produced once.

Mr. Gordon read well. Of particular note in the piece was the facility with which Mr. Gordon handled his characters, and the ease with which he got them on and off the stage.

It was decided at the meet that another gathering be held during the latter part of this month. It will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Williamson.

Gravel Cars Overturn Early Saturday Morning

Niles' freight yards became the scene of a bona fide train wreck at 12:10 a. m. last Saturday when two heavily loaded gravel cars, incorporated in a long, valley-bound train, were derailed by a broken flange.

One of the cars overturned. The other ripped up a number of ties, but remained on the roadbed. Considerable damage, done to the track, was repaired Saturday by crews. A wrecking crew was dispatched from Oakland, to right the capsized car, and get both big vehicles back on the track.

HUNTED MAN FOUND SERVING FELONY TERM

T. E. Randall Discovered In Georgia Chain Gang, Report

WANTED FOR MURDER

Will Be Released And Brought To This County

Local police yesterday received word of the apprehension of T. E. Randall, wanted in Alameda county for the murder of Carl Boettger, 37, in a brawl near Niles the night of March 1, this year. Randall was discovered in a Georgia chain gang serving an eight to nine-year sentence on a felony charge.

It is possible that the alleged murderer buried himself in the southern criminal camp to avoid murder charges pending here.

According to Deputy Sheriff Hugo Radbruch, arrangements are under way to secure Randall's release. He will be brought to this county to face charges of murder.

Randall is said to have killed Boettger with a knife in a brawl to settle an argument. Randall's complete disappearance baffled authorities for several months.

San Francisco Chinese Dies Of Crash Injuries

Word of the death of James Mah, 26, San Francisco Chinese, was received in Niles Friday. Mah was fatally injured in a bus-auto crash midnight Monday of last week north of Niles. He died Friday at the Fairmont hospital in Oakland, to which he had been taken after treatment here. Internal injuries and a fractured skull were the cause of death, according to reports.

Mah's machine was demolished in the crash, which is said to have occurred when Mah's car skidded into the path of the oncoming stage. The latter vehicle was also wrecked. The driver and four passengers were not hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Peterson and Mr. and Mrs. Tony Costa spent Sunday visiting the various airports. They were particularly interested in a glider flight at the Oakland airport, Peterson said.

COOPERATION PLAN INTERESTS MANY LOCAL FARMERS

R. V. Garrod, president of the California Division of Farmers Education and Co-operative Union met Monday night with the permanent organization committee of the recently formed Farmers' Protective league, at the home of W. A. Sloan, on Osgood Avenue, Irvington, to set before the committee the objects and set- up of his organization.

State secretary Fred Miller of the Co-operative Union added his voice to Garrod's in explanation of the purposes of the group. Of such great interest were the proposals to members of the local Protective league, that it was arranged to have another meet on June 18, at the Washington Union high school, in order that the two men may be heard by a large number of farmers of this district.

In addition to Garrod's work as state president of the Co-operative Union, he is a member of the California State Board of Agriculture, and intensely interested in the farm mortgage situation.

The provisions of the "Frazier-Lempke" bill to refinance farm mortgages at a low rate of interest were also discussed at considerable length at the meet and it was finally decided to send the following night letter to Albert E. Carter, congresssan from this district:

"We, the undersigned representatives of the Farmers' Protective League of Washington Township, do hereby urge your support of the Frazier-Lempke bill to re-finance farm mortgages Signed by: Eugene Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Randall, Antone Garcia, Mr. and Mrs. Will Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Alameda, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Sloan, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. John Oliviera and Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Durham."

All farmers in Alameda county are urged to attend the meet Monday night, to hear of the work of this militant organization.

Hetchy Worker Hurt As Work Nears Completion

Stumbling in an attempt to avoid falling debris in the Hetch Hetchy tunnel near Calaveras Sunday, James Jenner, worker, suffered a fractured leg when he was caught beneath a heavy rock that fell from the side of the shaft. He was immediately rushed to Pleasanton where he was treated by a physician.

Jenner's injury is the last that will occur in the bore, officials are said to have stated, inasmuch as the last 1400 feet of tunnel to be concreted was begun Sunday. The work should be finished sometime during this month.

On about July 9, it is said, the San Francisco-Irvington pipeline will be under construction as the last leg in the long task of bringing Sierra water to the great city.

SCOUTS IN PARADE

Sixteen Niles Boy Scouts were a part of the Niles delegation that took part in the Livermore Rodeo parade Saturday morning. The scouts were taken to Livermore by Ralph V. Richmond, Ray Peterson and Tony Silva.

Mrs. Clementina Smith, ill with an attack of influenza last week, has fully recovered.

Work On Decorations To Begin Tomorrow; Program Complete

Unabated effort of the committees during the past weeks has resulted in response that assures the success of the Washington Township Fair, scheduled for the latter part of this month.

Display space, the sale of which is the key in the triumph of the venture, will be entirely gone within the next two weeks, if present indications materialize.

Of the thirty-nine booths available when the sale started some weeks ago, only four are left, according to Chick Santos.

The township firms that have contracted for space to date are: Williams Brothers Produce Co., F. E. Booth Cannery, J and F Metal Products Co., M. and S. Tile Co., Leslie Salt Company, H. P. Garin Co., California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association, Holly Sugar Co., Alameda County Mosquito Abatement District, Kimber Poultry Farm, Salz and Co., Reid Brothers, Inc., Morton Salt Co., Arden Salt Co., California Pottery Co., Dickey Tile Manufacturing Co., California Nursery Co., James Graham Manufacturing Co., Niles Chamber of Commerce, Centerville Chamber of Commerce, Pacific Gas and Electric Company, Pierce Canning Co., The Japanese Association, Excelsior Bakery.

The following industries have stated their intention of taking space, but have not yet contracted for it:

Innes Cloverdale Dairy, Garcia Brothers Sand and Gravel Co., Pacific Coast Aggregates, Rhier Winery, Thomas Cactus Gardens, Shuckl Co. Cannery, California Chemical Co., Kraftile Co., International Wood Products Co., Jackson and Perkins Rose Gardens, Baily Produce Co.

Both street and gymnasium decorations will start tomorrow. The Warren Decorating company will have charge of the colorful display as well as the construction of the display booths.

According to Judge Norris, the program for the two opening evenings is complete and will be released next week.

TWO NEW TEACHERS GET CONTRACTS AT NILES

Two new teachers will assume their duties at the Niles Grammar school next fall, according to announcement made recently by the board of trustees.

The two instructors are Miss Lurena Chenery, of Long Beach, and Miss Mildred Bennett, of Oakland.

Miss Chenery, who has made her home in Niles for the past year, had been engaged as instructor at the Williamson private school. She is an honor graduate of the University of California and comes to Niles highly recommended. Miss Bennett, sister of Dr. R. H. Bennett, Niles dentist, taught formerly at Modesto, where she was counted a valuable instructor. The new teachers were signed to fill vacancies caused by the resignation of Miss Ann Perrin and Mrs. Helene Smith.

All other members of the present staff were given contracts for next year. They are: E. D. Bristow, principal; Celeste Bunker, Frances Macke, Selma De Young, Gertrude Keller, Louise Inglis, Dorothy Van Dervoort, Marie Curran and Cecilia Enos.

A GIFT FROM CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Township Register, on behalf of the Niles Chamber of Commerce, wishes to assure the merchants whose buildings have been decorated with flags in honor of the Livermore Rodeo and the Township Fair at Centerville, that this piece of public enterprise is a gesture of good-will from the chamber and will cost the individual business man nothing. Things like that don't happen often; and it is pardonable that many thought the company putting up the buntings would surely be around gathering up five-dollar bills with their colored flags.

You know, Niles Chamber of Commerce is different. Lately it is showing surprising enterprise, and when it does things, it does them in a big way. The town, indeed, is to be congratulated upon the forward spirit permeating the weekly meetings of the Niles civic body. The old attitude of lethargy has been supplanted by a civic energy and harmonious co-operation that can do nothing else but crystallize into a thriving, prosperous, growing Niles.

GOVERNMENT BY THE BLUDGEON!

The strike of the longshoresmen and the incidents following it, have shaken our faith, first in the honor of the individual, and then in the courage, honesty, industry and ability of the San Francisco and Oakland police departments. It is not only a reflection upon the men involved in the labor disorder and the municipal governments named, but the state of California as well. The duty of Sacramento is to move when the smaller political units fail to guarantee the safetv of citizens; and if Sacramento proves derelict in this then Washington should act.

The grievance of the striking longshoremen is not a matter for us to discuss, for we are not familiar with the issues involved. There are certain things with which we are familiar, and everyone is familiar unless his very nature is preverted by deep-seated prejudices, and a mental and spiritual outlook on life, neither in keeping with Christianity nor civilization.

Men have a right to strike. In unity there is power. If capital can organize, so labor also should be allowed to organize. Men striking have a right, we believe, to persuade by peaceful means—by pamphlet, by word, by argument—others from taking their places. They have no right, either by law or by the restraints of rudimentary social order to intimidate, beat up or murder men who are willing to fill the jobs that they have quit.

A government that will not protect a peaceful citizen against the bludgeon of a striker or any other tough, whether he be striker or strikebreaker, is unworthy of any respect or any confidence. The responsible head of that government should be removed for the crime of high treason. It has taken us thousands of years to gradually work out of the stone age, an historic period when every man carried around with him a stone hammer to kill and maim those who crossed his path. We have submitted willingly many of our personal liberties to restraint for our own good and the good of the collective whole. From that idea sprung modern government. We created a police power to guarantee our safety. In creating that power, we did something that often in our lives holds us in leash when the passions of rage and hatred would lead us to wreck revenge, maybe death, upon one who, for real or fancied reasons, we think has wronged us. We have created courts and enacted laws that we may go to them for redress or seek protection of their authority when we believe our constitutional rights have been trod upon.

But what happens when a police force stands with folded arms watching with apparent approval, organized labor (whom we might mention here controlls blocks of votes) beat into insensibility men who have taken their jobs? What, indeed, happens? That instant the progress of centuries crumbles away, and anarchy reigns.

Whether a man carries a union card or is a so-called "scab," he is an American citizen, and is entitled to physical protection, as well as all other rights under the law. If he does not get them, the government has failed, and it is no longer a gov-

LIGHT CARRYOVER INDICATES FANCY PRICES FOR 'COTS

Small Canners Stock Brightens Outlook For Growers

Sales since last fall and a short crop this year give indications that apricot growers will receive fancy prices for their product this year and next.

On June 1 there were only 118,224 cases of apricots unsold from the last pack according to the Canners' league reports on the year's carryover.

This is an exceptionally favorable figure as compared with the 241,414 cases unsold at the same time last year.

In view of this light carry-over and a short pack because of prevailing crop conditions, canners expect to sell all of this year's output and clear their warehouses for the 1935 season, which is almost a guarantee of good prices for the season. These prospects have been directly reflected to the growers who are receiving offers of more than double last year's figure for their crops. In some cases orchardists have received bids as high as $75 per ton for exceptional fruit, while offers of $65 per ton orchard run have been made to growers in Washington township. In San Benito county, which has the best yield in California this season, offers of $65 are common.

Dried fruit packers are also bidding high for apricots. Rosenberg Brothers, in their opening quotations, doubled their prices of 1933 and for a few grades even went higher than that.

Rumors that the crop in Washington township was being lessened in value because of cracking was disproved this week-end when a close inspection of a number of orchards showed the cracking to be confined to a few cots on the outer limbs.

RUNAWAY GIRL SENT HOME THURSDAY BY OFFICER

Arrayed in her brothers trousers and supplied with money from her sister's purse, fifteen-year-old Isabel Blanco, of Hayward was prevented from "going to Hollywood, to be an aeroplane pilot" last Thursday by the intuitive sense of Mrs. Anne Quarteroli, of Vallejo Street, Niles.

Mrs. Quarteroli first noticed the girl playing with children of the neighborhood among the cars standing in the Niles freight yards. Remarks made by the girl convinced Mrs. Quarteroli that the runaway was a girl, in spite of the male attire. She summoned Ward Crane, who in turn called Constable Tom Silva.

Pending Silva's arrival Mrs. Quarteroli induced the girl into the house, where she was questioned by the officer. Previous statements, made to other children, to the effect that her parents were dead, the girl confessed were untrue, and that she had run away from home. Silva notified her parents, and two tearful and worried sisters appeared a short time later to take the runaway back home.

Cousin Joan

By JANE STEWART

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

THE train came to a stop in the big station as if glad to reach the end of the journey.

Joan felt terribly alone in the big railway terminal. What if her Cousin John Browning should fail to meet her? And how would he recognize her?

He was to wear a blue tie, and to have a handkerchief with a blue edge sticking out of his pocket.

Some one touched her on the shoulder, and at the same instant a voice inquired—it was a pleasant voice—"Are you my Cousin Joan?"

The newly arrived traveler turned quickly. The owner of the voice was younger and more prosperous in appearance than she had expected Cousin John to be, but he wore a blue tie, and out of his pocket peeped a handkerchief with a lavender edge. The thought flashed through her mind, "That's just like a man to get colors mixed."

The girl smiled.

"Yes, I'm your Cousin Joan," she admitted, "and I was really beginning to be frightened for fear I was lost."

The young man took her by the arm.

"This way," he directed to the red cap, steering his newly acquired relative to the right. "My car is parked out on the cross street."

Her escort proceeded to point out the places which he thought would interest her.

"That is the public library," he explained, "and this thoroughfare is said to be the most famous in the world—Fifth avenue itself."

It was all a marvelous experience to the girl from the small town in the Mid-West. But when the car drew up a few moments later in front of an imposing home and the chauffeur turned with a query, "Shall I wait, Mr. Herbert, "an' take you down to the office again?" Joan was alarmed.

"No," her companion said, "I'm going to stay at home for the afternoon."

Joan shuddered.

"I'm—i'm afraid there's been a mistake," she said. "I'm Joan Bedford and I've come from Iowa expecting to be met at the station by my cousin, John Browning. I'm afraid," she added with an attractive smile, "that you've got the wrong girl."

Herbert Randall looked thoroughly bewildered. Then his face broke out in a broad grin. "How extraordinary!" he said. "But don't worry—I wasn't trying to pick up a nice girl. You see I was expecting to meet my cousin, Joan Freeland, who was expected on that train from the South. I've never seen her and I doubt if she could be more charming than you, 'Cousin Joan.'"

"Isn't it funny," she laughed, "that two Joans should have been expected at the same time this morning and both intent on meeting respective cousins?"

Herbert Randall admitted it was and added, "It surely is. If it's all right with you, let's return to the Grand Central and see if we can't locate that lost cousin of mine. After the mystery is solved—as I hope it will be without the aid of the police or Traveler's Aid—I'd be glad to take you to your destination."

Back at the station there was no sign of the Joan from Texas. Herbert decided perhaps inquiring at the Traveler's Aid desk might help matters. It did, and they learned that Joan Freeland—described as a woman with several bundles and a scotch terrier—had taken a taxi to an address which was Herbert's home.

The young man uttered a sigh of relief.

"That's Cousin Joan, all right," he declared. "I had forgotten she had promised Mother a new Scotty pup. You see, she raises them. Well, now that the mystery of her whereabouts is solved, it's high time you were taken to your cousin's safely."

"I've been enough trouble to you already," Joan Bedford declared. I'll follow the other Joan's example and take a taxi. It's been terribly nice of you to take care of me and—"

But Herbert interrupted. "You're not going to escape from me so easily, young lady. Think of what might happen if I left you to find your own way about this huge city. I'd never forgive myself if you got lost or stranded. Now, what is Cousin John's address?"

Joan realized with pleasure that it was useless to insist on going off alone in a taxi. So she took her cousin's letter from her purse. "Here's the address, Sir Galahad," she smiled to Herbert.

"Thanks. It won't take long to get there. And once you've had a night's rest in the city, how about a drive with me tomorrow?"

In spite of her family's strong advice before leaving for her visit, she found her companion's suggestion extremely agreeable. "Why, certainly," she said. "And am I to continue as 'Cousin Joan?'"

"For a little while, anyway," said Herbert, "at least until we can find some other status that will be more mutually acceptable."

Mary's Surprise

By ALICE DUANE

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service

"IT ISN'T as if there was any nourishment for me in meeting the Castles," argued Mary. "Mr. Harold Castle's married, and if he wasn't I wouldn't consider being the wife of a college president. So that settles that. So far as any social advantage that I can get by passing around tea and microscopic sandwiches at your friend, Mrs. Wilson's, while she and the wife of the new president stand in the front of the house and shake hands with two hundred and more women—well, I'm sure I don't see the point in it."

"Mary, you don't mean half you say," said her mother. "Of course, it is something of an honor to be asked to assist at the tea. Only seven other girls have been asked—but, anyway, even if there weren't any 'nourishment' in going to the reception—what do you have in mind for this afternoon that would be 'nourishing,' as you call it?"

Mary raised her pretty eyebrows. "I haven't decided what to do," she said. "Maybe I'll start west to seek my fortune."

And so it happened that on the day when all the women who were considered of any social importance around Blissville—the seat of Tome college—were attending the reception given in honor of the new hostess of the president's house, Mary Vernon, daughter of one of the leading trustees of the college, was driving her car toward the lake shore.

She had been speeding along for about fifteen minutes when she noticed a none-too-good-looking car drawn up at the side of the road and a little later a tall, well-built man peering into the opened hood of the car's engine. Mary stopped her car and offered assistance.

The man smiled and explained that he didn't have the least idea as to what was wrong.

Mary, who liked to tinker with her roadster, looked in at the engine. Her knowledge of the mechanics of automobiles was better than the average girl of her class because her brother had taught her considerable.

After tightening a couple of bolts and readjusting a wire connection, she asked the stranger to try turning on the motor.

"I think it will be all right now," she said. "I hope you won't be late wherever you're bound for."

The man thanked her and laughed. "I wasn't going anywhere in particular. And I hope I haven't detained you from some very important engagement."

Mary laughed. "I wasn't going anywhere, either—I was just out killing time."

"Want to kill some more time?" asked the man, and then he suddenly seemed embarrassed at what he had said. "I was wondering," he added, "if you would consider ourselves sufficiently introduced to warrant my asking you to stop in a little shop for some tea—there's a nice little place a few miles along this road."

Over the teacups Mary became more or less confidential as she talked to this man. Somehow his dignity seemed to invite her confidence. She told him that she had retreated from a reception in honor of the wife of the new college president. The man asked a few questions and then looked surprised, and after that, very much amused. Finally Mary added that she had been brought up in more or less of a college environment, and in her opinion most college presidents and professors as well as their wives were insufferably dull.

The man smiled and the smile developed into a hearty, good-natured laugh. As they arose from the table and it was time for them to separate, the man produced his personal card and handed it to her.

"Perhaps I shouldn't have waited so long to introduce myself," he said. "My name is Harold Castle—"

Mary looked bewildered, then she blushed and she wished she could sink right through the tea-room floor. But Mr. Castle held her hand reassuringly in his. "You see, I'm just a dull sort of college president—but at any rate I'm glad I'm coming to Tome for awhile. Perhaps, then, I'll be able to see you occasionally."

"I didn't suppose," stammered Mary, "that college presidents who have wives picked up girls on the road and took them to tea. It's perfectly all right with me, and I won't divulge the pleasant time we've had to anyone, but it's quite a surprise, Mr. Castle."

"That's the funny part of it all," said Mr. Castle. "There just isn't any Mrs. Castle. My sister is my hostess."

Mary arrived home a little while later. At the dinner table Mrs. Vernon couldn't keep her bit of gossip to herself.

"There really isn't any Mrs. Castle, Mary," she said. "Mrs. Wilson made a mistake and sent cards out to meet Mrs. Castle instead of Miss, and when she found out about it, it was too late to send out other cards. So really the new president is a bachelor. Perhaps he'll marry one of the girls in Blissville—"

"That would be nice," responded Mary. "Wouldn't it, mother?"

The "Statue of Grief"

The "Statue of Grief" is a statue of a mysterious veiled woman erected in Rock Creek cemetery in Washington in 1891 by Henry Adams in memory of his wife. It is a product of Augustus St. Gaudens, a famous American sculptor, and is considered the best of his many works, being rated by some as one of the outstanding pieces of American sculpture. It is sometimes called "Peace of God."

Mexican Jumping Bean

The Mexican jumping bean is the seed of any one of three varieties of swamp trees whose blossoms are selected by a small gray tortrical moth as a place to lay eggs. The resulting seed becomes the home of the larva. A mature larva or worm is about one-fifth the size of the "bean" and can throw and catapult itself around inside with enough force to cause the bean to move or jump.

It Happened Like This

By VERNON DARE

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service

WHEN news spread around town that Joe Albers and Peggy Rogers had been secretly married and had left town for a honeymoon that included Cedar Rapids, the whole town was agog.

What could have happened to Joe's engagement with Celia Winslow? Perhaps Celia wasn't quite sure about the whole affair herself. But here's the whole story. To start we'll have to go back a ways to a conversation between Peggy and Celia, who for many years had been close friends. It happened like this:

"Peggy, you're just wasting your breath. I simply won't have anything more to do with Joe."

"Well, I think you are acting like a narrow, catty girl. You know very well how much Joe loves you or he wouldn't have asked you to marry him."

"Then he's got no right to make engagements with a girl he was engaged to before. She's probably just come East to make up to him again—even if she is married herself. Joe should have called her up first, instead of just phoning me to say he had made a date for us tonight and hoped I would appear my best to meet his old friend. Well, I won't, so that's that!"

"But, Celia, Marge's husband is along. It was just to be a pleasant foursome."

"Yes, with me palmed off on hubby, so that Marge and Joe can talk of the dear days gone by. Not for me."

Peggy stood up and pulled on her chiffon scarf. "I'm sorry you couldn't have hidden your jealousy," she said, "and you've hurt Joe plenty."

Peggy went home and tried to shake Joe's troubles from her mind and also tried to be fair and impartial as far as Celia was concerned. She had scarcely arrived at her home before the telephone rang.

"Peggy, this is Joe again. You can't do anything with her? Well, you've been a swell sport. But here's a question you must say yes to. Will you be Celia for me this evening?"

Peggy gasped. "What good would that do?"

"As a matter of fact, Peggy, I don't want Marge to discover that I'm engaged to a girl that won't come around and meet her."

"O. K., Joe, I'll be glad to help you out," said Peggy.

Marge, and Marge's husband proved most charming and there was not the slightest doubt that they too found Peggy charming.

But then who wouldn't? Peggy's eyes were a mixture of mauve and deep blue and her lashes were long and upturned. She was sincere and apparently much in love with Joe. Joe would have been only too pleased to have had greater possession of Peggy during the evening, but Marge's husband saw to it that nothing like that happened. In fact Joe felt something like a thundercloud enveloping him as he watched Peggy and Marge's husband having dance after dance together and having no thought for anyone but themselves.

Marge glanced amusedly at Joe's troubled eyes. "Joe, Bill is just doing that to tease you and to give us plenty of time to chat. We love each other so much that we couldn't even think of anyone else seriously." She put a sisterly hand on his. "Don't be jealous—jealousy breaks up too many happy marriages. I think your fiancee is perfectly charming. And you see, Joe, she doesn't care how much time we spend together. She trusts you—you must trust her. She's worth it."

Joe smiled and returned the pressure of Marge's warm fingers. "All right, Marge, I'll take your advice and try not to be jealous. And since you like her so much, Marge, maybe we'll stop off at Cedar Rapids on our honeymoon and visit you."

"Peggy," said Joe, an hour later when he had Peggy tucked carefully beside him in the taxi homeward bound. "I told Marge that I would bring you out to visit them on our honeymoon."

Once more Peggy gasped. "Celia and I are not exactly twins," she told him. "How will you explain it all? I'm sorry, as personally I think Marge and her husband are both charming company. I wish they lived here in the East so that I could see some more of them. I do think, Joe, you might have been a little more thoughtful of Celia. If you had telephoned her first and asked her if she wanted to make the engagement, she might not have felt as she did. You must remember Celia is a little jealous."

"Why the—now?" questioned Peggy.

"Because, dear, I love you. Is there any chance in the world you'll have me?" Joe spoke wistfully. "There must be a chance—I don't think I could live if you are in love with some one else. However," he laughed triumphantly as he folded Peggy in his arms, "I'm not going to kick in and I have already promised Marge—you know."

"Of course we couldn't disappoint Marge," Peggy said happily.

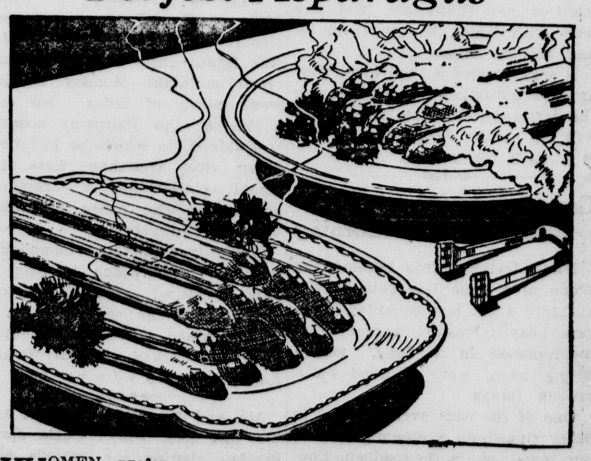
Perfect Asparagus



WOMEN prefer asparagus—like promises—unbroken. It takes a lot of care to keep both intact.

Did you ever see asparagus being shipped from California? There are crates and crates of strange boxes inside the cars. Pyramid-crates is the name for them and they are made in that unusual shape to fit the asparagus which tapers at the top. Each bunch of asparagus is wrapped in a blanket of wet moss for further protection.

Try It

And did you ever try to cook it without breaking a single tip? One way is to put the bunch in the bottom of a double boiler, add the boiling water and then invert the top of the boiler over the tips, so that the steam cooks the tips and boiling water cooks the tougher stalks.

Tender canned asparagus is a favorite with women because it holds an unbroken record of unbroken asparagus. It can be heated right in the can, and when opened every tip is as correct as the finger tips of milady who has just come from her manicure. Served in salads, or hot with butter sauce, or in a delectable au gratin dish, this is indeed asparagus with distinction.

Drifting about among dinner parties you may have had occasion to ply the new asparagus lifters. They are the last word in the exacting demand of women that their asparagus remain to the last—unbroken.

P.-T.A. ENDS TERM ACTIVITIES THIS WEEK

Term-end activities, piled up before the Niles chapter of the Parent-Teachers Association last week, have been diminished, according to Mrs. Roland Bendel.

Monday the mothers of the eighth grade pupils entertained the members of the graduating class at a dinner in the school cafeteria and a party in the auditorium.

Th last Ways and Means affair, held Tuesday in the form of a bridge whist proved successful. Ten tables played.

The summer round-up of preschool children was started Wednesday morning, with Mrs. Harvey Braun and Mrs. Frank Silva assisting. Mrs. O. W. Ebright is examining all children who will start to school next fall.

At the request of the Parent-Teachers' Association, Dr. I. O. Church, county physician, will supply vaccine for inoculation of the pre-school youngsters. The Niles school is the only one in the county requesting this precaution. The request must come from the parents.

The Cub Pack, sponsored by the association, held their first den meetings this week. Den Chiefs Tommy Bunting, Jackie Parry and Junior Bonde, chose their "Denners," or assistants. Russell Ross, overseering the boys, stated that the "Bobcat" tests have been passed.

CIVIC GROUP VOTES APPROVAL OF SALES TAX AT MEETING

Scout Committee Tenders Resignation Monday; Accepted

Retention of the sales tax, as a means of supplying funds to carry on state government, was unanimously approved by the Niles Chamber of Commerce Monday, after hearing a talk on taxation by William F. Knowland.

The speaker told of the machinery of government set up to effect economies during the next two years. He urged that the public take an interest in how its tax money is being spent, and that government be run on the same basis of economy as is a private business.

Leslie F. Herrick, chairman of the Livermore Parade Committee, sent special thanks to the Niles group for its assistance and participation in the Livermore Rodeo, reported to have been the best ever held.

The resignation of the boy scout committee, appointed only two months ago, was read and accepted by the civic group. Investigation of the difficulties that at present threaten to disrupt the scout troop, will be carefully made by the chamber executive committee. A new scout committee will be appointed in the near future.

ALTERATIONS MADE IN COURTHOUSE AT NILES

More space for the machinery of the law and a little less for its courtroom manifestations will be the result of alterations now in progress at the Niles courthouse.

Under the direction of Jones and Ellsworth, the building is receiving its first "dressing up" in fifteen years.

Extensive changes are being made in the interior for the purpose of allowing additional office space for the justice and the officers. A room for the use of the constable, heretofore relegated to the open courtroom, has been laid out. The office of the justice will hereafter afford ample space for a jury room. The quarters were cramped prior to the changes. Actual courtroom space will be considerably lessened, according to Judge J. A. Silva.

Proper selection of type, careful composition, and painstaking press work are the foundations of good printing. The Register is justly noted for all three. Let us estimate your next job. Call Niles 23.

JUDGE W. T. DAVIS MANAGER OF REPORTER

Judge William T. Davis, former publisher of the Pleasanton Times, and well known in this district, last week took over the management of the Castro Valley Reporter as a temporary arrangement while the financial affairs of Roy T. Cowles, former publisher, are being straightened out. It is likely that Davis will be retained permanently.

A journalist of wide experience and sound newspaper sense, Judge Davis was for fourteen years publisher of the Pleasanton Times, now one of the Parks publications. It is the hope of this office, as well as that of his many friends, that Judge Davis is successful in his new venture.

JOAN CRAWFORD IN "SADIE McKEE" DOES EXCELLENT ACTING

Film enthusiasts are this week getting an unusual treat at the Hayward theatre. Wallace Beery, as Villa, has done some of the best work of his career in "Viva Villa" which began last night, and will continue through Saturday. Leo Carrillo, as the hair-trigger captain will raise the hair. It is an altogether excellent motion picture.

A comic page comedy come to life is the dish for Sunday and Monday with Hal Leroy and Rochelle Hudson in "Harold Teen." Robert Montgomery and Elizabeth Allen add to the program in the mystery romance "The Mystery of Mr. X."

"Sadie McKee" hailed as another triumph for Joan Crawford, comes to Hayward screen Tuesday for a three day run. "Let's Be Ritzy," with Lew Ayres is an added attraction.

GOLD LURES NILES MAN TO ALASKA NEXT MONTH

The call of gold, and the often irristible urge to seek the yellow metal, will take one of Niles well known residents to Alaska early in July, when O. F. Trask will accompany Captain John C. Benson, 70 year old mariner, to Nome, aboard the first sea-going gold dredge to invade the northern waters.

According to Trask, who is assistant manager of the venture, the ship, called the "Gold King", is a converted cannery vessel. It is the first dredge to employ huge suction pumps, for sucking the beach sands into the vessel where they are washed for gold. In past years surveys have proved that the sands off Nome and in Wilson Bay, on Kodiak Island, are fabulously rich in the yellow metal. Until the launching and equipping of the "Gold King", no feasible method had ever been devised to recover the wealth. The suction pumps of the 'Gold King" will take up 8000 cubic yards of beach every 24 hours. In addition to the sand pumps, the vessel will employ two huge clamshell dredgers. Prospecting parties will be sent ashore, Trask said.

According to Captain Benson, who visited in Niles with Trask Saturday, the 'Gold King" will have to leave Nome each year prior to October 15, in order to escape the ice on Bristol Bay and the Bering sea. The base of the ship will be at Wilson Bay, on Kodiak Island. Captain Benson stated that he has been "30 years a landlubber" and that he was glad to get to sea again.

Trask is an experienced miner, having spent seven years in Alaska previously.

Enjoyable Outing Is Held Sunday By Amador Alumni

About seventy people attended the first annual Amador Alumni Association barbecue held last Sunday at the McKinley Park, Pleasanton, according to Frank Trimingham, president.

Delicious barbecued steak, baked beans, salad, and all the trimmings were served. The chefs were Raymond Martin and Everett Nevin.

During the afternoon entertainment was enjoyed. Bill Letham, of Pleasanton, performed a number of magic tricks which interested the audience immensely. Several accordian solos were rendered by Miss Margaret Richmond.

Frank Trimingham, as president of the new organization, introduced W. D. Black, of Berkeley, former athletic coach at the Amador Valley high school. E. O. McCormick, principal of the high school also gave a short talk.

Although the affair was given mainly to introduce the class of 1934, who were the guests of the Alumni at the barbecue, only six of the twenty members of the class made an appearance at the outing. The six who attended the barbecue were Eric Hansen, Nadine Wisely, Harold Kamp, Mildred Silva, Anna Hanifen, Annette Giorgis, and Roma Rodrigues.

Buford Hall was chairman of the barbecue committee and was assisted by Ray Martin, Everett Nevin, Victor Banke, Russell Andersen, Francis Bottini, Ed Soito, Cyril Bairos, Roy Arendt, Bill Mendonca, Cliff Rosa, Hal Cope, Frank Triminghom, Bill Bittini and Melbourne Lambert.

Amador High School To Have Tennis Courts Built Soon

That the Amador Valley high school will have an up-to-date tennis court in the near future was decided upon by the board of trustees of the Amador Valley high school at a trustees' meeting held recently.

The courts are to be constructed by the school district and are to be used by the people of the community as well as the students of the school.

Present plans for the court calls for two double courts finished off with concrete to be constructed on the north side of the high school gym.

For the past several years the students and faculty of the school have been trying to get the community to construct the courts and after considerable consideration by the members of the board they finally decided to have the project advanced.

The trustees voted to let the boys of the high school put in turf for the Amador high school football field.

NECESSITY OF FIRE DISTRICT SHOWN BY BLAZES

Favorable action is expected of the board of supervisors on the fire district petition recently filed by the citizens of the Irvington region, according to reports heard last week.

Edward Chadbourne and Ernest Garcia, two young Irvington business men who started the ball a-rolling several weeks ago, feel that their efforts will be crowned with success. Following action by the board, there will be several more meetings at which details will be worked out.

Public opinion in the matter was swung considerably toward the progressive side when two fires in the town necessitated the assistance of engines from neighboring towns.

ATTENTIVE THRONG HEARS VIVID TALK BY LEGION HEAD

Homer Challaiux Urges Fight On Communist Menace

Problems facing the nation today, and the part the American Legion is playing in their solution were the basis of a vivid address Tuesday night by Homer Challaiux, state legion commander, at the Veterans' Memorial building at Niles.

A large and representative audience attentively listened to the fiery legion official as he told of efforts of the organization in furthering the passage of the Veterans' Compensation Bill. Challaiux pointed out that the sum involved was far less than was generally supposed, and that it would be paid to those men whose disabalities were the direct result of the great war.

In telling of education and the legions' stand, Challaiux urged that communists be expelled from all schools and that extra care be taken to prevent communist teachers from obtaining degrees in the universities. He told of the cost of crime in the United States as compared with the much smaller cost of education.

Challaiux advocated the deportation of aliens convicted of any crime in California, and deplored the charity and hospitalization conditions that deny aid to native Californians while assisting untold numbers of aliens. He advocated restricted immigration, with the admonition to keep "America for Americans."

Selections were played by the Druids Band, under the direction of Tony Clark, both before and after the gathering. The legionaires stated their pleasure in the band's participation. Mrs. Bunting sang three delightful solos. She was accompanied by Henri Salz.

Flags and Buntings Down After Carnival Tournament

Flashes of falling color in Niles Monday afternoon marked the conclusion of the carnival period for the town, when representatives of the Warren Decorating Company, of Fresno, arrived in the city and began the work of removing the streamers and flags that had featured the Booster parade last Wednesday.

The decorations, in the opinion of many, were the best the town had ever had. Arrangements for the decorations last week had been made by the Niles Chamber of Commerce.

ernment but a creature of political expediency.

You read a week or so ago of several strikebreakers having been cruelly beaten, one suffering a broken back. Rescued and put on a tug, an attempt was made to put them ashore and have an ambulance take them to a hospital. For three hours the police department of San Francisco was paralyzed, and the suffering men lay in agony writhing in pain, while a great city went about its business, foolishly feeling secure under such a regime.

Think of that for a while. Ponder upon it. Try to assimulate it with your vaunted civilization and Christianity. Here were human beings, with souls like you and we are supposed to have, lying in a tossing tug, with a broken back or their brains laid open by the club of a tough, groaning in pain for hours because of political cowardice and governmental maladministration. And above us in the high heavens our God looked down upon a scene that must have made Him feel that our protestations of fealty to the Divine Power are but mockery and sacrilege.
